

Excessive Watering

Watering During Drought

Excessive Watering

- Excessive watering results in wet wilt causing plants to turn yellowish green
- Reason this happens with excessive watering:
- Creates a N deficiency due to increase in leaching
- More importantly, excessive water creates an oxygen deficient soil also, excessive water reduces iron availability
- Causes root dysfunction and disease

Watering During Drought

Basic Rules

- Mow grass at maximum acceptable height
- Reduce weed competition
- Irrigate without run-off